WRITE IN

What did you like most about this class?

- Everything was clear cut. The assignments were consistent, and you had enough time to complete each assignment.
- I enjoyed the control the instructor had over what was accessible, when. It helped me not to be overwhelmed.
- It was very organized.
- Due dates on Friday, not Sunday. Outlines for each week/chapter. Access to the prof
- Online, learned quite a bit
- Only quizzes. No exams.
- Understanding the topic better. Relating political science to daily government news.
- I liked that the discussions weren't every week and were spaced out
- Subject
- Easy, no exams, short and sweet papers.
- The course material was very educational and thought provoking
- Lectures
- E-book allowed the read-aloud option.
- What I liked most about this course was learning about different types of government.

What would you change about this class?

- The only thing that I would change is that it would be nice if the lecture notes could be unlocked the weekend prior for people that like to work ahead.
- I would indicate in the syllabus what days of the week, specific dates, that quizzes would take place.
- The essays in this course were fun to write however the substantial point deductions for not having a correct format were kind of tedious.
- Keep important information on outline, textbook should support not necessarily hinder quizzes
- It would have been nice to allow time on the weekend to complete assignments. I work M-F and it is hard to find time after work to complete assignments.
- nothing
- Not much.
- The rubric for essays and discussion posts seemed somewhat formal and strained for what seemed like straightforward factual short answer essay questions.
- Nothing
- Quizzes
- Instructor reminders about coursework. Even just a weekly automated email via outlook appointment. Allow papers to be a little longer if need be making a relevant point in 2 pages can be tricky. Max of 3 or 4 pages.
- Longer essay requirement to better argue your statements.
- Essays
- No suggestions.

What did you like least about this class?

- same as above.
- I missed a quiz because I wasn't sure what day of the week quizzes were due.
- What I said about the essays
- N/A
- the material
- papers graded harshly with minimal constructive feedback
- Had a good experience with this class. Discussion was intimidating at first but it soon became apparent what was expected which is usual.
- This is going to sound negative, and I know i need to learn definitions and concepts, but some of the jargon and lingo was confusing, and I had a hard time understanding why it was relevant, e.g., realism, structural realism, liberalism, neoliberalism, ...
- Quizzes
- So many quizzes worth so few points, a couple of mis clicks or misunderstandings on questions and you can really change your grade. Extra credit or a retake allowance should be permitted.
- Not much discussion opportunities between students and instructor about the course material and main/big ideas. Could have learnt more that way.
- None
- Essays, I should have stopped by the writing center. I will make sure to do this throughout the summer.
